CHAPTER I BACKGROUND

A. Research Background

Speaking is one of skills in English that should be mastered by the learner. Speaking means output production orally that can give information about anything. Harmer (in Wahyuni, 2016) states speaking is the ability to speak fluently and presupposes not only knowledge of language features, but also the ability to process information and language ' on the spot ' while Quianthy defines speaking as the process of transmitting ides and information oraly in variety of situations.

In communicating, Human are required to use good and correct speaking. So, that the information can be understood by the listeners. If someone communicates in a bad speaking, it is worried that it will change the meaning of the language even the listener may misinterpret the information conveyed. Therefore, it is required for students to learn how to communicate properly and correctly so that the exchange of information between two people or group can work as desired.

For some people, language is a weapon that is very useful to influence others by giving the understanding to listeners or trying to convey our thoughts toothers. Many ways can be done as a medium to convey information using language such as public speaking. Public speaking is the art of effective verbal communication in front of the audience both in small and large groups. The effective can be achieved if the information conveyed by the speaker can be well understood by the listener, and the listener gives feedback as expected by the speaker. This public speaking skill is very important for people. The ability to speak in public is an obligation and a need for people who want to succeed.

Nikitina in Nugraheni (2017) states that public speaking is a process, an act and art of making a speech before an audience. One of the important things that must be mastered by people who want to be successful is the ability to communicate effectively and be able to speak in public well and easily understood by the listener or make presentations effectively verbally andnon-verbal language. Verbal languages are made up of spoken words and non-verbal languages are the signals sent by ant other means, such as with our hands, body, face, and eyes. For example, you might clench your fists as you talk about an issue that anggers or smile as you recount a pleasant experience. There are non-verbal messages that accompany the idea itself.

James H. McBurney and Ernest J. Wrage in (khoriroh, 2018) provide the definition of speech as communication of ideas and feelings by using visible and audible symbols originating from the speaker. Whether the speech is authentic or interpreted, private or public, small group or large group, it is all oral communication.

It can be concluded that speech is a mean of delivering information that is often done by many people. On this occasion, the researcher will examine the paralanguage of President Joko Widodo's speechwhich were held at the World Economic Forum on ASEAN on September 11-13 in Ha Noi, Vietnam 2018 and at the 16th Annual Forbes Global CEO Conference in Jakarta, Indonesia2016. He is the 7th president of the Republic of Indonesia and he is a very famous person. In fact, he was often invited to several major events abroad and delivered speeches to leaders from other countries. Before he served as president, he was already famous in various cities, especially solo cities. He led a solo city as a governor, even as he called it "blusukan".

Johar states (2015) that paralanguage is non-linguistic and nonverbal communication behavior in human interaction that modifies meaning and conveys speaker's feeling and emotion. Paralanguage is bodily communication or non-verbal communication that plays a fundamental parts in human social behavior. Recent research by social psychologists and others has shown that these signs play a more important part, and function in a more intricate manner, than had previously been realized. Therefore, the researcher is interested in examining the paralanguage that applied by President Joko Widodo's speech. In his speech, this number one person in Indonesia revealed the conditions of the world economy. In fact, President Joko Widodo mentioned a character in a prestigious film as a parable in his speech. Starting from the speech of President Joko Widodo, the researcher is motivated to analyze the paralanguage of the speech delivered by President Joko Widodo.
